Successful product launches, continued technology leadership

In August, Day launched Communiqué 4.1, the latest version of the only native JCR (JSR 170) standard compliant enterprise content management solution available on the market. Initiated by Day, JSR 170 is the Java Content Repository (JCR) standard for the enterprise content management industry. Communiqué 4.1 revolutionizes the enterprise content management market by decoupling a vendor's content management application from its underlying repository.

Day also launched Content Repository Extreme (CRX) version 1.2, the latest version of Day's innovative product that enables the storage, management and exchange of content across large-scale enterprises. Day's CRX provides an open, standards-based infrastructure for integrating business applications with any structured or unstructured content in an enterprise. New features in Day's CRX enable the exchange of high-value content between applications and underlying repositories.

During the third quarter Day's CTO, David Nuescheler, led a successful face-to-face meeting of the JSR 283 expert group. JSR 283 is the Content Repository for Java™ Technology API Version 2.0 and represents the next version of JSR 170. The event was hosted by IBM, and included the key expert group members from companies such as IBM, Oracle, Sun and SAP.
